School Board Approves
Summer Workshop

The School Committee this week approved a summer workshop which will develop a handwriting curriculum for the school system, particularly the elementary grades.

The four week course which will cost $2500 will identify an appropriate handwriting technique to be used consistently in the Cohasset schools. It will develop also a sequential curriculum in handwriting which would be implemented in the elementary grades as well as providing those grades with a checklist for performance.

An occupational therapist/handwriting consultant and teachers from both the Joseph Osgood School and the Deer Hill School will comprise the three professionals in the workshop. Those teachers from the elementary schools will then serve as in-school instructors to implement the handwriting technique and curriculum in September.

Director of Special Education Stephen Hart said that staff had been noticing the difficulty students had been having in forming letters. He felt that the lack of consistent and uniform handwriting education was to blame.

Kenneth Ekberg, principal of the Deer Hill School, said, "This is a felt need. There is not a standard handwriting system in Kindergarten through third grade, through sixth grade, or anything." Ekberg said that occasionally a writing workbook is used at the Deer Hill to augment spelling exercises and doesn't focus primarily on handwriting.

Joseph Osgood School Principal Jack Craemer concurred with Ekberg. "We are lacking uniformity and techniques. Teachers can cast handwriting aside. It has been ignored and children feel it."

Superintendent of Schools John Maloney said that utilizing staff members who will implement the new curriculum in the fall will avoid the necessity of buying into a large handwriting company which would provide services annually.
